(December 22, 2011) – LANCASTER, PA. – Fulton Financial Advisors' Clermont Wealth Strategies division today announced that three of its employees were included in the Central Penn Business Journal's (CPBJ) top twenty-five list, "2012 Best Wealth Managers in Central Pennsylvania."

Jessica Malone (vice president) ranked #4, Ken Norman (vice president) ranked #18 and Charlie Robson (senior vice president) ranked #23 on the list.

"We're very proud of Jessica, Ken and Charlie for their accomplishment," said Paul Nicholas, executive vice president of Clermont Wealth Strategies, "They work very hard to provide exceptional service to our clients and it's great to see that their continuous efforts and dedication can be reflected in this recognition."

Fulton Financial Advisor's Clermont Wealth Strategies division was also ranked #4 on the CPBJ's top twenty-five list, "2012 Best Wealth Management Firms in Central Pennsylvania."

"We credit this achievement to our valuable team of employees," said Dave Hanson, chief executive officer of Fulton Financial Advisors, "Each and every one of them has distinctive qualities that contribute to our team's success and create a remarkable experience for our clients."

This ranking and list was based on research from the Polk-Lepson Research Group (PLRG), which conducted a survey that was sent to the CPBJ's readers. The survey asked the respondent to identify up to three of the best wealth managers and 3 of the best wealth management firms located in Central Pennsylvania. They were also asked to rate the wealth managers in the following categories: customer service, integrity, knowledge/expertise, being proactive in their advice, communication, value for the money, meeting the client's needs and overall performance.
